

What we know can change the world: faculty experiences writing for popular audiences

As doctoral students, you spend the bulk of your time learning how to rigorously produce answers to important questions. This panel will help you think about what you can do with the knowledge you are learning to create.

Please join Jennifer Hirsch, Co-Director of the Columbia Population Research Center, for this panel on Thursday April 14th, intended for Columbia university doctoral students across all schools, at which faculty who are recent participants in the Public Voices Fellowship program will discuss their experiences sharing their expertise with the world outside the university through Op-eds and other forms of popular writing as well as through public speaking.

The speakers will be David L Bell, Anne Higonnet, Jessica E. Justman, and Marni Sommer, who over their year as Public Voices fellows shared their expertise with hundreds of thousands of people across the country and around the world.

Thursday, April 14th, 4-6 pm
Columbia School of Social Work, room C03
1255 Amsterdam Avenue (between 121st and 122nd Streets)
4-5pm Panel Discussion
5pm Wine and Cheese Reception

Don't miss this great opportunity to think about how to leverage your expertise outside of the academy. Also a great moment to build community with other doctoral students.

Please RSVP @ <https://cupop.formstack.com/forms/cprcevent>

Sponsored by the Lerner Center for Public Health Promotion and
Henry S. Lodge, MD FACP